CLIMB DETAILS

This day will provide options to adjust your route as needed. The first loop will head into the mountains for a journey to Dry Valley – rightfully named due to the absence of streams. This loop will have an optional 2.5 mile climb with 740 feet of elevation gain, for those that wish to leave every bit of energy out on the course. During the second loop, the group will enjoy a relaxing route that follows the Little River into the Ellejoy Valley and past the University of Tennessee Little River Environment Unit. The route then turns north toward Knoxville and meanders through rolling hills and farm pastures. On the way back to Blackberry Farm, cyclists will explore some of the most beautiful country lanes in East Tennessee including Bethlehem Church Road, a favorite of local cyclists.
